

Tourism in Mali, Tombouctou, Djene and Dogon Kingdom: Mali Empire and more

Mali is one country in Africa that portrays the typical African image on the type of civilization that rules the people in their respective villages and small towns. A place where things are yet to remain natural for easy assessment and study, that is the main reason touristic study always comes with a great success. Tourism in Mali is focused primarily on its cultural sites, which sets it apart from other African countries with large tourism sectors known for their natural features. Mali is the most endowed in World Heritage sites in Africa. Djingary Ber and Sankore in Timbuktu, The mosque of Djene, Dogon Country, and Dialloube were all recognized by the international community through inclusion in UNESCO World Heritage. These prestigious cultural sites added to beautiful landscapes, vibrant and colorful neighborhoods and villages and the central Niger Delta with its earthen architecture and its Ramsar sites that host each year thousands of water birds, the Sahara desert whose beauty, in some places, the excitement grows as you. By its geographical position, its history and culture, Mali is a tourism and crafts-oriented country. However, the greatest wealth in Mali's tourism industry is Malians themselves. Their hospitality, warmth and openness to all visitors in other words, the diatiguiya makes each visit to Mali a memorable one. Diatiguiya is not only defined by the extra attention paid to the visitor, but also the quality of sharing and listening. Mali has a rich cultural background and the country celebrates various Festivals throughout the year in different regions: cultural festivals, music festivals, religious festivals, during which discussion forums are organized with the participation of foreigners from all continents.
